Students are the future of our country and we at NewsX spoke to some bright youngsters who are leading the path at a very young age, they are the change makers who are inspiring many youngsters who want to make a change in our society.

Starting with Vivhan Rekhi, a student of The British School, New Delhi, where he serves as the Community Service Representative, and works directly with the School Director and Board to plan, initiate, and lead school-wide outreach initiatives. At the age of 16, he founded Rescuing Wisdom, a social service initiative that advocates for elderly responsibility through philanthropy. In this role, he has facilitated multiple partnerships to benefit local old age homes, raised over Rs. 13 lakh to support their operations, and continues to fund the organisation's work through the sale of his book, "The Knife's Edge". For his work with Rescuing Wisdom, Vivhan has received multiple national and international awards.

We would like to thank all you kind hearts for donating generously towards the welfare of many abandoned elderly people. With your support, we have bought a vehicle that has started operating, it goes around Delhi to pick up the Elderly who have been abused and abandoned. Apart from the vehicle, we have also installed 4 ACs for the old age home as Delhi is soaring at 48°C. Your kind deed and positivity are helping many people in the society who are neglected and we are thankful to all of you for the same. Also, we would like all of you to raise awareness towards the abuse towards elderly people and help us prevent it. Please accept our sincere gratitude for providing support to help us rescue them.

15-YO Delhi Boy Raises Rs 12.5 Lakh To Buy Ambulance for An Old Age Home!

"As long as I can, I want to make this world a better place for elderly people, who are like my grandparents, to live in. I also want to make sure they know that they're not alone," says 15-year-old Vivhan Rekhi. #Heartwarming #YoungIndia

Vivhan Rekhi, a 15-year-old student of The British School in New Delhi, hails from a traditional business family living in one of the city's poshest localities, Greater Kailash.

Despite his background, he has spent the past few years volunteering with different non-profits to help those most in need—the abandoned elderly. He is using his privilege for good.

For the past two years, Vivhan has been volunteering at the Guru Vishram Vridh Ashram, an old age home, in the Delhi-NCR region run by a non-profit called Saint Hardyal Educational and Orphans Welfare Society (SHEOWS).

"Growing up with my own grandparents' wisdom and unconditional love has been a blessing. But imagine supporting and nurturing your family over decades, only to be turned out on the streets by them when you enter your golden years. Sadly, that's the fate of thousands of elderly who have been abandoned by their families," he writes in a Facebook post.

To further his efforts, he has started an organisation called Rescuing Wisdom, which also supports other non-profits like Earth Saviours Foundation in their care for the elderly.

At the old age home, he would spend time with the seniors, assist with whatever resources they needed, and did whatever he could to improve their plight.

“One day, during the inauguration of an ICU at the Guru Vishram Vridh Ashram facility in Faridabad, the old age home approached their volunteers for funds, they needed to buy a van. Since they rescue people at night in the Delhi-NCR region, they needed this vehicle. The goal was to initially raise Rs 5 lakh,” says Vivhan, speaking to The Better India.

Picking up valuable lessons from an online course he did on crowdfunding from Wharton, and a three-week course on public relations and marketing from Yale last year, Vivhan started a crowdfunding campaign in April 2019.

In a month, he raised Rs 12.5 lakh, more than doubling the target.

Vivhan standing in front of the rescue vehicle/ambulance he's bought with the money raised.

“With the money raised, we bought them a proper ambulance equipped with all necessary medical equipment like stretcher, first aid, monitors and oxygen cylinders, besides donating medicine, air conditioners, etc. Their facility in Faridabad is where they pick up all these abandoned elderly and treat them. It’s like a mini hospital. When they are better, they are transported to their facility in Garhmukteshwar in UP, which houses around 200-300 seniors. I’m also in the process of tying up with other NGOs to help them out as well,” he says.

One thing he learnt through this process is that whatever the cause. It’s always going to be tough to raise money. Many praised the purpose but did very little monetarily.

“One has to make the person connect with the cause, believe in it and see the harsh realities. Only when they relate to the situation, can they be persuaded to donate money,” shares Vivhan.

To make others see what’s going on, he made a video to depict the conditions many of these elderly citizens live in. No stone was left unturned to raise awareness.

Vivhan used his school's forum to publicise the message, approached his parents and their social network base.

He is also part of the Young Entrepreneurs Academy (Delhi Chapter), an international association, and used their forum to publicise the message.

Nearly two weeks ago, the ambulance arrived.

"When we rescued a senior citizen from the streets with the ambulance, I was overjoyed. It's a feeling that's hard to describe," he says.

Speaking to Humans of Bombay, Vivhan reiterated his commitment to the cause.

I'm 15 years old, but I want to dedicate the rest of my life to this cause. I remember talking to this rescued woman who constantly kept saying—'mujhe ghar jaana hai' [I want to go home] when she didn't even have a home. Through all this, I am constantly reminded of how alone, ignored and deprived of love they are. So for as long as I can, I want to make this world a better place for them to live in and I want to make sure they know that they're not alone."

Another bright youngster is Rajveer Singh. The 16-year-old is currently studying at Oberoi International School. Singh, who used to study in Doon School, says: "One of my biggest accomplishments in the field of community service whilst at the Doon School are working with The Angelique Foundation to raise funds for and complete a library for a school where unprivileged students can study free of cost." Another youngest we spoke to is Aviraj Singh Machre, who is 19 years old and is currently studying at the University of St Andrews in Scotland. Reminiscing his days as a Doon school student, Machre says: "As a member of the school's economics society I set up a model on smart cities that focused on innovative and efficient methods to produce electricity and supply of water. I found this particularly useful when I volunteered with the Adarsh Buniyadi Primary Municipal School in Sanjan, Gujarat to set up a water filtration system for the students."

Last but not the least, Sasha Singh, a student of Class 12 at the Shri Ram School, Mouslari, Gurgaon, says that her compassion towards the underprivileged started from her regular visits to her ancestral village Tohana. During her previous visit to Tohana she noticed that the civil hospital was lacking basic Covid-related medical and personal protection equipment. Sasha raised funds from her community to supply critical healthcare equipment.

16-year-old teen leader rescuing elderly people from Delhi streets

By The CSR Journal - April 25, 2019

Yesterday, we told you about nine-year-old Ridhima Pandey who is suing the government over climate change inaction. Meet Vivhan Rekhi, a 16-year-old boy from Delhi British School, working hard to raise funds with a mission: to rescue the abandoned elderly from the streets of Delhi.

He has been living with his grandparents in a joint family. "Their stories are illuminating and their unconditional love a blessing. I firmly believe that we should cherish the time we spend with our elders," he says.

He was horrified when late one night, returning home from a friend's birthday he saw a frail old man and a tiny hunched old woman fighting dogs over leftovers. "That night I couldn't sleep, and I asked myself why old people have to fight dogs for food, and how can I help?" he writes on Ketto.

Vivhan learned that thousands of elderly have been abandoned by their families on the roads of Delhi. Old age homes run mostly by NGOs care for an abysmally small number. But they are helping, and he wanted to get involved. His father identified an old age home and over the last year, he has been volunteering a few hours every week at Guru Vishram Vridh Ashram (GVVA).

Providing care, shelter, and love to the homeless elderly through two old age homes, one in Delhi (2003) and the other in Garhmukteshwar (2008), GVVA has saved over 4,000 elders according to Ketto. A dedicated team at GVVA scours for the disowned and brings them to the shelter for medical attention and rehabilitation.

He is currently raising funds through Ketto for a rescue vehicle. "When I heard they were trying to raise funds to buy a vehicle to rescue over 3000 adults over the next decade, I thought this truly could be a gift that keeps on giving, and that I personally could leverage my social network to make this happen."

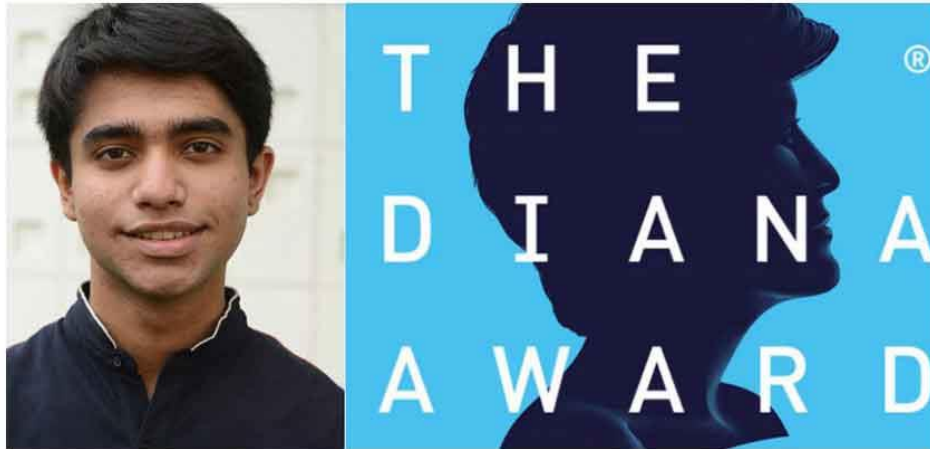

This article is part of a series on inspiring child leaders.

Thank you for reading. Please drop a line and help us do better.

THE YOUNG FOR THE OLD

BY SREYA DEB ON APRIL 26, 2019

Last updated on April 27, 2019

Old people who face poverty and abandonment now have a young champion of their rights: 16-year-old Vivhan Rekhi, a school student

“If you call me in two years, and ask me what I’m doing, I’ll show you. I’ll prove to you that I really do plan on seeing this through,” assures Vivhan Rekhi, 16 years old, currently dealing with an extremely stressful milestone of adolescence: Board exams. However, this is not what seems to be occupying the majority of his thoughts.

Vivhan’s venture to rescue and provide aid to the elderly on the streets is his focus. He talks to Patriot about his initiative, how it came to be, and what his plans for the future are. He comes across determined and confident, and extremely polite.

Having raised surprisingly significant funds for his initiative in a matter of a month, Vivhan didn’t waste any time in setting the wheels in motion.

It started for him in 2017, when he visited the Guru Vishram Vridh Ashram, where his father was engaged in work. This is where the elderly are brought in and treated, following which they are sent to the Garh Mukhteshwar counterpart of the old age home. Vivhan has been volunteering here for a year now.

“Most people see taking care of elders as a chore, but it wasn’t like that for me,” he says. He explains that they deal with poverty and abandonment, and need company aside from the monotony that sets into the lives of these aged men and women. So, he decided that he would take measures to the best of his ability to make conditions for them easier in the old age homes.

Vivhan lives in a joint family, and recalls an incident that really shook him into action. Used to seeing his own grandparents in a home environment, he was not expecting to see what he saw on his way back from a friend's birthday party. An old couple, frail and shivering, trying to fight with dogs for leftovers on the street.

On doing a little research, he found that the number of old age homes, and the way they are run, is less than ideal. He decided then that he wanted to do something to correct this situation.

Vivhan proceeded to start a crowdfunding campaign on Ketto, where he had set a target amount of Rs 5 lakh. The amount collected however, stands at Rs 11.75 lakh. This money would be used to fund vans equipped with medical supplies that can travel around the city and rescue more distressed senior citizens. These vans would be able to rescue 3,000 people in a decade.

Some of the balance amount is being used to create a medical kit for senior citizens at the old age homes — something he created in partnership with a friend. Medical professionals have been consulted and a prototype has been made. Vivhan expects the circulation to start fairly soon too.

He used social media to popularise his venture and garner more attention. He posted on Instagram, Facebook and Snap-chat, and has received over 300 shares online already. He even made a video, so as to appeal to a larger demographic. He plans on taking up Business Management in college, and it's fairly clear that he has a knack for it.

Vivhan likes to maintain a personal touch, and visits the old age home once a week during lunch time, to spend time with the senior citizens there. He defends strongly but calmly when asked about how far he wants to see this fledgling project. He informs that he has already been in touch with about 20 NGOs that he wants to collaborate with.

He has started a foundation called the Rescuing Wisdom Foundation. People with missing family members who suspect that their elderly have been picked up by an old age home, get in touch with pictures and details, which are then distributed among this network of NGOs. Not only is he trying to create a safer and more comfortable atmosphere for struggling senior citizens, but he is also attempting to reunite them with their families, if they are so willing.

"I founded the Drama Club at school," he says when asked about whether or not he spends any time being an actual teenager. But as it turns out, his acumen for social work has wiggled its way into this domain of his life too. He has been in the process of arranging for Grade 9 students to visit the ashram for five hours over eight days, and perform theatre for those living there, on topics relevant to them and their conditions.

"I'm doing as much as I can now, because I want to make sure that even when I go off to college, and cannot be this directly involved, the whole thing is running smoothly," explains Vivhan. He has big plans for social work in this regard — rescuing and helping the distressed senior citizens on the streets, and seems to be trailing a blaze to his end goal.

Raising Lakhs For the Elderly to Fighting Climate Change: 10 Teens Shaping the Future

8. Vivhan Rekhi: Making The World a Better Place For The Elderly

Vivhan Rekhi, a resident of Delhi, is an active volunteer at an old age home, run by a non-profit called Saint Hardyal Educational and Orphans Welfare Society (SHEOWS).

One day, the old age home approached the volunteers for funds, as they needed to buy a van. Having some knowledge about crowdfunding, Vivhan started an online petition to raise funds. The initial target was to raise around Rs 4 lakh, but thanks to his social media insight, they managed to collect a whopping Rs 13.5 lakh.

Motivated by the overwhelming response, Vivhan decided to launch his organisation named 'Rescuing Wisdom' to utilise the remaining amount for the betterment of abandoned senior citizens.

Vivhan also collaborated with the National Centre for Elderly Abuse to raise awareness about the atrocities that the elderly go through.

'The state of affairs for the elderly in this country is deplorable. I would never have realised the harsh realities had it not been for the volunteering programme. So, for as long as I can, I want to make this world a better place for them to live in and I want to make sure they know that they're not alone.'

LetzChange is an online giving and fundraising website helping you leverage your social network to raise funds for the causes you believe in

Founded with a vision to allow NGOs working in even the remotest areas in India to secure funds from domestic as well as international donors. On a mission to make social giving a habit by empowering millions of people to share their wealth with the needy, regardless of how small the amount.

We focus on the little things that make a difference to the world, operating with the inherent realisation that the power to change our (sometimes morbid) reality, lies within us. With the product we try to bridge the gap between the have's and the have-not's by enabling either side with the tools that they need to reach out to the other. With our communication channels, we try to promote any and every positive news and event that benefits humanity. And hence the diversity of posts on our fb timeline.

15-YO Delhi Boy Raises Rs 12.5 Lakh To Buy Ambulance for An Old Age Home!

Trending story found a year ago on www.thebetterindia.com

Vivhan Rekhi, a 15-year-old student of The British School in New Delhi, hails from a traditional business family living in one of the city's poshest localities, Greater Kailash. Despite his background, he has spent the past few years volunteering with different non-profits to help those most in need—the abandoned elderly. He is using his privilege […] More

SHEOWS in associate with Rescuing Wisdom, an initiative by Mr. Vivhan Rekhi under the guidance of Mrs. Ambira Rekhi, visited Tihar jail, to help the elderly find a home after the completion of their term at Tihar. This initiative was started so that no elderly should feel abandoned after release. . .

Vivhan Rekhi

Vivhan Rekhi is a Grade 11 student at The British School, New Delhi. He enjoys all forms of written and spoken expression, including debates, theatre and, of course, creative writing. His creative writing works have been featured in student writing blogs, and his plays have been performed at The British School and as street theatre performances. He is also the founder of Rescuing Wisdom, a foundation that advocates philanthropy for elderly responsibility. This is his first book. All proceeds from the book will go towards supporting the elderly through Rescuing Wisdom.
